THE MYSTERY OF A YEAR.

A little while, a year agone. I knew her for a remping child, a dimple and a glance that shone With idle mischief when she smiled.

Today she passed it e in the press, And, turning with a quick surprise,
I wondered at her stateliness,
I wondered at her altered eyes.

To me the street was just the same.

The people and the city's stir.
But life had kindled into flame.

And all the world was changed for her I watched her in the crowded ways, A noble form, a queenly head, With all the woman in her gaze,

The conscious woman in her tread.

 A. Lampman in Youth's Companien. DOG AND STUFFED TIGER.

A Little Incident From New York City's Varied Street Life.

"In a Broadway show window," said a stroller, "there is a particularly big and handsome tiger, stuffed, that I have often looked at in passing. I saw in front of this stere the other day a man who had with him a tremendously big, shaggy dog. The man looked at the tiger, and stopped and tried to draw the dog's attention to it. But the dog didn't look that way, and, in fact, he didn't stop. He slowed down, just as one man might have dono for another who had stopped for a moment to look in a window or to speak to a friend, and when he had moved ahead a few steps in that way, not finding himself overtaken, he did just as a man raight have done again. He swung round with the same measured tread and came back to the window. Then the master, with a faint smile, again invited the big deg to look at the tiger, but instead of delag that the big dog looked up into his master's face and wagged his tail, and the master looked down and amiled at his dog then the man started on down Brendway, with the big dog wagging his call, walking along beside him.

"But while the big dog had shown no desire to look at the tiger, lad, in fact, shown rather an aversion to looking at it, it did not appear that this aversion came in any degree whatever from fear. The perfect self possession and the deep and unbroken good humor of the dog were unmistakable; apparently he sinply didn't care for tigers and didn't want to look at this one, but it did seem that if it had been possible for the tiger to come to life and step down from the window and around and out through the door on to the sidewalk then the big dog would not have walked away; that there would then have been there on the sidewalk the loftiest scrap that Broadway ever saw, with the chances-well, the chances were in favor of the dog. "-No York Sun.

Unique Pianes.

"All manner of articles in place of wood have been used in the manufac ture of pianes," says one of the greatest English piane makers. "Perhaps the most successful of these is paper, of which many pianes of exquisite tene and appearance have been made. The Dake of Devousing has one of the finest specimens of the paper pians, this being of French make, and decorated most ornately with pictures by French artists. The duke gave little gainer: mainly, no doubt, on account of the ornamentation. I suppose you know that pianes for very her and very cold eli mates-all instruments for export, fact-have to be specially made, and in this direction all manner of experiments have been tried. Among others, a sort of gollulose, one factor in which is actually common molasses, from which sugar is made, is employed, and a conposition made from the chemical treatment of gutta percha and leather pulp has been tried. Ivory pianos are by no means uncommon, and the downger Countess of Dudley has a magnificent carved specimen. Pianos of ivory are, I might say, made every year in numbers, but chiefly for Indian princes and rich Spanish Americans. Many pianos of solid silver have been made; indeed, one was only recently completed by a London firm for the nizam of Haidara bad, and piano cases have at various times been made of brouze, a species of alumining, glass, percelain and in combination mother of pearl."-Exchange.

"There are, of course, cases to the contrary, but these are few. Where girls marry men who are known to have led what is called a 'worldly life,' it is more generally due to a misunderstanding of forts or to ignorance than people imagine. There is a type of girl who finds a peculiar satisfaction in the cenquest of a man who has 'seen the world' and then comes to her as the one woman of all her sex who can make him happy. To Name Springfield's Four Hundred. It has been seven years since a Blue Book was printed, and in that time there have been many social changes. Some have dropped out of the charmed circle, some of the buds have developed into matrons, while others are still serving as bridesmaids. And some of the plebeions have acquired property or gained culture and are knocking for admission at society's gate. All that is needed is official recognition. We need a Blue Eack, the stars to indicate the grade of patricians. It will be well for the compiler to remain unidentified until the book has been published, and then, as in the previous case, to promptly leave town—to go far away and stay away. The Price & Lee company, which has been compiling dry and accurate directions. teries of Springfield, has the tomerity to announce that it is prepared to classify Springfield society. The preliminary circulars are out. Now is the time to get into line if you want a three star grade in the firmament of the Four Hundred. The Blue Book enumerator has not started on her rounds yet. Entertain and go to entertainments. The sheep and goats are to be divided, and it may again be seven years before another Blue Book division is made.-Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Messing of the Word "Omaha." The name "Omaha" bears testimony to the long journey of the people, and reveals some of the causes which brought about this breaking up into distinct tribes. It is composed of two words, were the people-who went up the stream, while the Quapaws, their near of kin, went, as their name reveals, "with the current," or down the stream. The traditions of both these peoples say that the parting occurred during a hunting expedition, each division finally settling in the lands whither they had wandered apart. This epochal hunt must have been centuries ugo, for the Quanaws bore their descriptive name in 1540, being mentioned in the Portuguese narrative of De Soto's expedition as then living on the Arkansas river, where they dwelt until 1839, when they United States.—Alice C. Fletcher in

The Laws of Nature,

The laws of nature are just, but terrible. There is no weak mercy in them, drowns, the air consumes, the earth buries. And perhaps it would be well for our race if the punishment of crimes against the laws of man were as inevitable as the punishment of crimes against the laws of nature-were man as unerring in his judgments as nature.—Long-fellow.
